New Gun Laws Spur Stockpiling

Some stores report a run on ammunition after measures pass

Albany, N.Y.

Gun enthusiasts fearful of new weapon controls and buying into rumor mills about government hoarding are purchasing bullets practically by the bushel, making it hard for stores nationwide to keep shelves stocked.

At a 24-hour Walmart in Albany, the ammunition cabinet was three-fourths empty this week; sales clerks said customers must arrive before 9 the morning after a delivery to get what they want. A few miles away, Dick's Sporting Goods puts up a red rope after ammunition deliveries so buyers can avert races to the gun counter. Both stores have set ammunition limits.

In mid-January, two days after New York became the first state to toughen laws post-Newtown, Mark Smith said he spent $250 to stockpile ammunition, including $43 for a brick of 500 .22-caliber bullets, commonly used for target shooting and hunting small game.

"I had a feeling there was going to be a huge ammunition shortage," Smith said.

At Hunter's Haven, a gun shop in Rolesville, N.C., clerk Dean Turnage said ammunition is going out "as fast as we can get it in," even though new gun controls are not on the state's agenda.

The run started in November with President Barack Obama's re-election, followed by the mass shooting in December of children in Newtown, Conn., which led the president to launch an effort to strengthen federal gun controls and several states to tighten their laws.

Connecticut on Thursday became the latest to crack down as the governor signed a measure — effective immediately — that adds more than 100 firearms to the state's assault weapons ban, creates

Driven by Fear

The nation's 100 million firearms owners are driving the market for some 10 billion rounds annually, with demand and gun purchases increasing the past several months, driven partly by fear that tougher laws will restrict the ability to buy guns, said Lawrence Keane, whose National Shooting Sports Foundation is based in Newtown, Conn.

"There's a concern by firearms owners that this administration will pursue bans on products, bans on ammunition. ... It's not limited geographically to New York or anywhere else. It is nationwide," he said. (AP) a dangerous weapon offender registry and institutes eligibility rules for ammunition purchases.

Hours before the law took effect, hundreds of customers streamed out of Hoffman's Gun Center in Newington, Conn., with guns and ammunition. John Power, 56, argued that the new law would not stop a troubled gunman.

"The bad guys are going to get guns," he said. MICHAEL VIRTANEN (AP)

2 Men Sought in Death of Colo. Prison Boss

Denver

Two more men connected to a violent white supremacist gang were being sought Thursday in connection with the slaying of Colorado’s prisons chief, the first official word other gang members might be involved.

The search comes about two weeks after prison gang member Evan Ebel was killed in a shootout with Texas deputies. He’s a suspect in the killing of Department of Corrections chief Tom Clements on March 19 and of pizza deliveryman Nathan Leon two days earlier.

While it’s not clear whether the gang, the 211 Crew, is linked to the killings, a warning bulletin issued late Wednesday by the El Paso County Sheriff’s Office was the first official indication there might be a tie.

James Lohr, 47, and Thomas Guolee, 31, aren’t being called suspects in Clements’ killing, but are considered persons of interest. Their names surfaced during the investigation, El Paso County sheriff’s Lt. Jeff Kramer said. He Authorities say the two Colorado Springs men are members of the 211 gang and have been associated with Ebel in the past.

Both are wanted on warrants unrelated to Clements’ death, and authorities believe they are armed and dangerous.

Ebel is the only suspect that investigators have named in Clements’ killing, but they haven’t given a motive. They have said they’re looking into his connection to the 211 gang he joined in 2005 while in prison and whether that was connected to the attack.

“Investigators are looking at a lot of different possibilities. ... We’re looking at all possible motives,” Kramer said Wednesday.

Meanwhile, Gov. John Hickenlooper on Thursday announced an audit to ensure the state’s prisoners are serving their correct sentences and a review of state parole procedures by the National Institute of Corrections. CATHERINE TSAI (AP)

Fragile Calm in S. Korea

Residents pay little heed to North, but concerns are rising

Seoul, S. Korea

The bustling South Korean capital has been defined for decades as a place of traffic jams and luxury malls, long days of work and longer nights of sipping rice liquor. Residents rarely behaved as though their routines could be upended in minutes by the North.

But after years of largely ignoring threats from North Korea, some residents say they are becoming a bit jittery, with the ascension of an unpredictable young leader in Pyongyang and levels of fury not seen since the early 1990s.

Coffee shops are still packed, but South Koreans' concerns are palpable in quieter moments. Their phones buzz with news on the North's moves: its declaration of war; its plans to restart nuclear facilities; its barricade of a joint industrial complex near the border.

Rather than play down the possibility of an attack, South Korean officials have emphasized their ability to strike back. In the event of an attack, South Korea will "respond immediately without political consideration," said a senior official.

South Koreans differ in their views of their northern neighbor, which is reflected in public opinion polls. Over the past two months, the amount of South Koreans who say the North is their top concern has more than tripled.

Just 26 percent of South Koreans say the North is their top concern. More care about job creation.

On Thursday, the fear spread to South Korea's stock market, which sustained its biggest daily fall of the year.

Still, even the segment that is concerned about the North is far from panicking. During a crisis 20 years ago sparked by North Korea's intent to withdraw from the nuclear Non-Proliferation Treaty, some in South Korea rushed to stock up on canned goods and water. This time, grocery-store shelves remain full.

"We have no alternative to remaining calm, because what can we do to personally prepare for emergency? Virtually nothing," said Park Hyeong-jung, a researcher at Seoul's Korea Institute for National Unification.

"We live in a congested area of more than 10 million population. What a catastrophic chaos we will have if individuals begin to worry about tomorrow."

Afghans Accuse Pakistan of Snarling Peace Efforts

Kabul, Afghanistan

Afghanistan accused Pakistan on Thursday of placing unacceptable conditions on efforts to bring peace to the country after nearly 12 years of war, the latest in a series of barbed exchanges that has sunk relations between the two neighbors to a new low.

A breakdown in ties threatens to hinder — or even paralyze — attempts to lure the Taliban to the negotiating table. That's a key goal of the U.S. and its allies as

Backstory

Relations between Pakistan and Afghanistan have been hot and cold in recent years, though they had been improving in recent months. So far, Afghanistan has been unsuccessful in getting militants to negotiate peace and needs Pakistan's help. Further complicating efforts to gain traction on a peace process is internal fighting among members of the Taliban, a senior Pakistani official said. (AP) they work for a peaceful solution in Afghanistan ahead of the pull-out of foreign combat forces.

Afghanistan and its international backers consider Pakistan crucial in bringing the Taliban and other militants into peace talks. Pakistan holds dozens of Taliban prisoners and has been accused of backing the insurgents in an effort to be able to exert influence in Afghanistan after foreign troops leave.

A senior Pakistan official, however, said that Islamabad remained committed to reconciliation. (AP)

Up for Cabs

What should a taxi look like? Maybe it should be painted solid red, like a D.C. Taxicab Commission panel suggested in February. Maybe it should have a standardized dome light on top and a credit-card reader inside. The commission is requiring that all taxis have both gadgets in the next few months.

Or maybe it should resemble the black Dodge Charger that picked me up in Chevy Chase, Md., last Friday night. There were no lights on the roof — just blue interior ones that gave the backseat a cool glow. And up front, there was no taxi driver. Instead, it was Abiy, an engineer who loves to drive and is earning extra cash for his upcoming wedding by spending his week-ends using SideCar.

SideCar, which launched in D.C. last month, is the newest smartphone app in town to summon rides on demand. But unlike Uber, which connects folks with professional sedan drivers, and the slew of competitors — including UberTaxi, Taxi Magic and MyTaxi — that virtually hail traditional taxis, SideCar doesn't require the person behind the wheel to be on the job. Anyone with a car can apply to be a driver in SideCar's network. Once they pass a background check and get training, they can connect with passengers who've requested a pickup. And rather than have a set rate, SideCar spits out a suggested donation, which users are allowed to deviate from as much as they want when they settle their bill via cellphone. (That's the trick that has allowed SideCar, so far, to escape taxicab regulation.)

By Vicky Hallett

Even in D.C., with its history of slugging — a low-tech version of SideCar that helps people take advantage of HOV lanes — most people I've discussed SideCar with think it's nuts. But I don't buy the argument that it's any more dangerous than getting into a cab. Before Abiy arrived, I saw his photo and a picture of the car, so I knew exactly whom to look for. The whole trip was tracked by GPS. And he had every incentive to offer a comfortable, direct, safe ride.

I gave him a five-star rating and the suggested donation, which was exactly what a friend recently spent for the same trip in a traditional taxi.

Abiy gave me a lift home, a bottle of water and something to think about: What if all cars were signed up for SideCar?

For now, the service is essentially a pay-what-you-want taxi. Abiy wasn't planning to drive across town until he picked me up.

But if a driver coming down the street happened to be going my way, and we were able to communicate that with each other, I could pay less money and we'd both benefit. If we could make those kinds of trips happen on a larger scale, we'd reduce congestion on roads and everybody would arrive at their destination faster.

We'd still need traditional taxis to ferry passengers to places no one else is headed. But whether they're red or not, we'd start looking at them in a very different way.

Part of Langdon Park has already been renamed after Chuck Brown, but D.C. has even bigger plans for it, including a music pavilion.

Too Much Chuck Brown?

Residents push back against city's planned park for go-go icon

Washington

It started with a high-profile promise to thousands of heartbroken fans. "Don't you think we need to find a way to remember Chuck Brown forever?" Mayor Vincent Gray asked the crowd grieving the death of the Godfather of Go-Go at the Washington Convention Center last May.

Gray announced he would name a park after Brown. The pledge to immortalize the D.C. musical icon in some place "where we can look forward to 'Bustin' Loose'" won Gray a standing ovation that day. But 10 months later, his plans to honor Brown by renovating a Northeast park are in limbo after neighbors have made it clear that more action is precisely what they don't want.

"I like Chuck Brown, but the issue is ... why was the community not consulted?"

— DELORES BUSHONG, A NEIGHBOR OF LANGDON PARK, WHERE A MUSIC PAVILION DEDICATED TO BROWN IS PLANNED

A portion of what was long known as Langdon Park, located between 18th and 20th streets south of Rhode Island Avenue, is now officially known as Chuck Brown Park. But plans to build a large amphitheater on the premises, seating more than 900, have been scaled back in the face of community protests, imperiling hopes that a ribbon might be cut on Brown's birthday, Aug. 22.

"I like Chuck Brown, but the issue is ... why was the community not consulted?" said Delores Bushong, a resident of nearby Hamlin Street who has organized opposition to the plans.

The pushback has been awkward for Gray, who ran for mayor in 2010 on a platform of more broadly engaging residents in government initiatives.

"We're trying to work with everyone to have an open dialog on this," Gray spokesman Pedro Ribeiro said. "Obviously, you can't make everyone happy, but [we've] really gone forward to help bring folks into the design process."

Gun-Control Bill Goes to O'Malley

Annapolis, Md.

The Maryland General Assembly has passed a measure to make the state's gun laws among the strongest in the nation.

The state Senate voted 28-19 on Thursday for final passage. That sends the bill to Democratic Gov. Martin O'Malley, who proposed it.

With the legislation, Maryland will become the first state in nearly 20 years to require people who buy a handgun to submit fingerprints to state police.

Only five other states have a similar requirement: Connecticut, Hawaii, Massachusetts, New York and New Jersey.

The Maryland measure also will limit gun magazines to 10 bullets. It will ban 45 types of assault weapons, and people who have been involuntarily committed to a mental health facility won't be able to have a gun. (AP)

Which Final Four team has the edge in Atlanta? | 15-17

Nationals outfielder Jayson Werth, center, hit a three-run homer Thursday in Washington's series-finale victory over the Marlins at Nationals Park.

Nats Make It Look Easy

Washington opens season with sweep of hapless Marlins

Nationals

That wasn't much of a test.

Washington Nationals right-hander Jordan Zimmermann worked around eight hits over six innings, Ryan Zimmerman's three hits included a two-run double and the Nationals beat the Miami Marlins 6-1 on Thursday to wrap up a lopsided season-opening three-game sweep.

Jayson Werth padded the margin with a three-run homer in the seventh, a sign that his left wrist, broken last season, is gaining strength. Bryce Harper had another eventful day, collecting two hits for the third-consecutive game, taking an elbow to the face while scoring a run, and later getting thrown out trying to steal third with cleanup hitter Zimmerman at the plate.

Nationals outfielder Bryce Harper slides home safely in the first inning Thursday.

Coming off a majors-best 98-win season in 2012, the Nationals outscored the Marlins 11-1 in the series. At least Miami finally scored, ending a 19-inning run drought in the second inning Thursday on Justin Ruggiano's first-pitch homer to right off Zimmermann (1-0).

Zimmermann followed sterling outings by Nationals starters Stephen Strasburg (seven scoreless innings Monday) and Gio Gonzalez (six scoreless innings Wednesday) by giving up only one run. But the Marlins got at least one runner on in every inning against Zimmermann, who nonetheless kept getting out of trouble.

Relievers Henry Rodriguez, Tyler Clippard and Craig Stammen finished up.

The St. Louis Cardinals began the 1943 season with 26 scoreless innings against Cincinnati, the post-1900 major league record, according to STATS LLC.

The Marlins have a payroll that's under $45 million this season after trading away several top players, including Jose Reyes and Hanley Ramirez. And yet this isn't exactly a new problem. Last season, they batted .244 — the worst average in franchise history — and scored 3.8 runs per game — their fewest since a 3.6 average in 1993. HOWARD FENDRICH (AP)

Better to Win Late Than Never

Wizards have surge at end of the season for 3rd-straight year

Wizards

The Washington Wizards' pipe dream of sneaking into the playoffs came to a crashing halt Wednesday with a loss at Toronto that eliminated them from playoff contention, but the simple fact that this sentence contains the words "Wizards" and "postseason" shows how far this team has come since the start of the season.

After the grisly 0-12 start to the campaign, the Wizards, dealing with patchwork lineups, injured stars and out-of-the-blue contributors, righted the ship to play some solid basketball. They have a 23-19 mark since John Wall returned, including eight straight home victories heading into Saturday's contest against Indiana.

Yes, long-suffering Wizards fans have seen this show before: Washington won its last six games of the 2011-12 campaign and six of 10 in the 2010-11 season. But this year's surge has a different tenor.

John Wall, A.J. Price and the Wizards have won eight straight home games.

"There are things for all of us to show coming down the stretch," coach Randy Wittman said.

Where prior Wizards teams were merely playing out the string, this year's group seems determined to finish in ninth place in the Eastern Conference — laughable to the league's big boys but a step in the right direction for the Wizards.

"We are still fighting for our season," guard John Wall said. "Just to know where we came from to start the season to where we are now, we have a lot of pride in ourselves. We want to close the season strong. This is the most wins I've had since I've been here, so it feels great."

With seven games remaining, Washington is 28-47, tied with the Raptors for 10th place in the East and 2½ games behind ninth-place Philadelphia. Six of the Wizards' final seven games are against playoff teams, and the other is against the 76ers.

Turn Back the Clock

The Wizards will honor the 35th anniversary of the Washington Bullets' 1978 championship Saturday by unveiling a new championship banner and reuniting the team.

► That squad — led by Wes Unseld, Bob Dandridge, Elvin Hayes, Phil Chenier and Kevin Grevey — knocked off Seattle in seven games.

► "We are thrilled that we can commemorate the proudest moment in our franchise's history by reuniting the members of the championship team and reliving those memories with our fans," Wizards owner Ted Leonsis said. (E.S.)

This, however, may not be as daunting as it seems. Since Wall returned, Washington is 13-8 against teams with winning records, although the team will be without shooting guard Bradley Beal for the remainder of the season due to a stress injury in his right fibula.

"We are not trying to cruise either," forward Martell Webster said. "You can easily say it's time to pack it in because we are not playing for the anything, but we are. We are playing for each other."

D.C. United, CSN Agree to 3-Year TV Deal

D.C. United

D.C. United fans have an outlet to watch their team this season, although the setup is not as all-encompassing as they might have hoped.

D.C. United and Comcast SportsNet announced a three-year television rights agreement Thursday, but a number of dates on the 2013 schedule remain untelevised.

The first game of the new CSN deal isn't until May 8, when D.C. United hosts the Houston Dynamo. Friday night's game at Sporting Kansas City will be available only on the pay-per-view MLS Live or MLS Direct Kick packages, and the same goes for April 13's showdown at RFK Stadium against the rival New York Red Bulls.

Each year of the new deal includes a 16-game minimum, all available in high definition, with the likelihood that more games will be added as the network's programming becomes more clear.

A major reason the local broadcasts won't begin for another month is because the programming involving the Capitals and Wizards pres-

Sporting Kansas City is led by University of Maryland product Graham Zusi and fellow U.S. internationals Benny Feilhaber and Matt Besler. United will be without second-year winger Nick DeLeon, who will miss about five more weeks with a hamstring strain that he suffered in United's last match. The rest of the lineup should be well-rested, with the team coming off a bye week and not having played since a 2-1 loss to Columbus on March 23. (A.C.)

ents a conflict. Those two teams, and the Redskins, account for scheduling in September and beyond, which is why the last scheduled D.C. United game on CSN as of now is Sept. 15.

"United is a dynamic brand that delivers a tremendous amount of exciting content to our network's lineup," CSN president Rebecca Schulte said in a statement. "We are proud to continue in our longtime position as the official sports network of United and provide their passionate fans with the most comprehensive Black-and-Red coverage." Final Four's Finest

It's no surprise Louisville made it to the Final Four. The top-seeded Cardinals entered the tournament as the favorite. But Syracuse, Michigan and Wichita State? While Louisville is riding a 14-game winning streak, the other three teams struggled down the stretch. The Orange lost four of their last five regular-season games. The Wolverines went 6-6 before the NCAA tournament. And the Shockers lost six of their last 13 before their unexpected Final Four run. What each team did in the past, though, doesn't matter anymore. Whether they entered as the favorite or as an underdog, these are the four teams left standing. So which has the edge? JEFFREY TOMIK (EXPRESS)

Best Coach

- 1. Jim Boeheim, Syracuse: He has one title, four Final Fours and more than 900 wins. On top of that, the one thing he's best known for — his vaunted 2-3 zone — has been the catalyst to this year's run.
- 2. Rick Pitino, Louisville
- 3. John Beilein, Michigan
- 4. Gregg Marshall, Wichita State

Best Backcourt

- 1. Louisville: The Cardinals have the perfect combination of elite scorer (Russ Smith) and leader (Peyton Siva). While they have drastically different offensive games, both players are stellar defensively — combining for more than four steals a game.
- 2. Michigan
- 3. Syracuse
- 4. Wichita State

Best Frontcourt

- 1. Syracuse: C.J. Fair and James Southerland are the Orange's top 3-point shooters and most consistent scorers. Rakeem Christmas and Baye Keita are essential in protecting the rim in the middle of the zone — each blocking more than a shot a game.
- 2. Louisville
- 3. Michigan
- 4. Wichita State

Best Player

- 1. Trey Burke, Michigan: The Big Ten player of the year hasn't shot the ball well this tournament, but he's still averaging 15.5 points along with 7.8 assists and 3.0 rebounds a game. Burke can do it all.
- 2. Russ Smith, Louisville
- 3. Michael Carter-Williams, Syracuse
- 4. Cleanthony Early, Wichita St.

Best Offense

- 1. Michigan: The already dangerous Wolverines offense, littered with NBA talent, has gotten even tougher to stop with freshman forward Mitch McGary stepping up as a viable offensive weapon during Michigan's tournament run.
- 2. Louisville
- 3. Syracuse
- 4. Wichita State

Best Defense

- 1. Syracuse: The Orange's 2-3 zone has never looked better as Syracuse has held its opponents to 48.5 points a game in the tournament. In their past two contests, the Orange had a total of 22 steals and 17 blocks vs. Indiana and Marquette.
- 2. Louisville
- 3. Wichita State
- 4. Michigan

Tourney Rewind

The four most memorable moments of the 2013 NCAA tournament so far:

1. Dunk City: Florida Gulf Coast used a high-flying offensive attack to upset No. 2 Georgetown and No. 7 San Diego State to become the first No. 15 seed to advance to the Sweet 16.

2. Ware's Injury: Louisville's Kevin Ware broke his leg in a horrifying play. Teammates and coach Rick Pitino were visibly shaken — with some even crying on the court. Fortunately, Ware had surgery and expects to be playing basketball again in a year.

3. Wild West: Three of the West Region's top five seeds lost their first game and No. 1 Gonzaga didn't make it past the first weekend. No. 9 Wichita State came out of the region, becoming just the fifth team seeded ninth or higher to reach the Final Four.

4. Wolverines Roar Back: Michigan was down 14 with less than 7 minutes left and down five with 21 seconds remaining against top-seeded Kansas, but never gave up. Trey Burke hit a deep 3-pointer to force OT, and Michigan went on to win. JEFFREY TOMIK (EXPRESS)

Rick Pitino

Louisville

(33-5, 14-4), MIDWEST REGION CHAMPS

KEY TO FINAL FOUR RUN

Forcing turnovers. Louisville was second in the country in steals and turnover margin during the regular season and its pressure defense has fueled the Cardinals' run. They have a plus-22 turnover margin and 48 steals in four tournament games. Russ Smith has also helped; the guard has averaged 26.0 points a game.

WEAKNESS

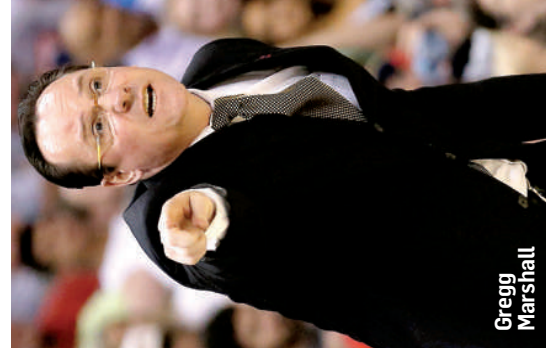

3-point shooting. Smith has been hot all tournament, but his shot selection can be problematic at times. In Louisville's five losses this season, Smith was just 3-for-23 from 3-point range (13.0 percent). As a team, Louisville shot 32.8 from behind the arc, ranking 217th in the country.

PATH TO THE FINAL FOUR

2nd round: No. 13 Montana, 81-34
3rd round: No. 12 California, 66-60
Sweet 16: No. 1 Indiana, 61-50
Elite Eight: No. 3 Marquette, 55-39

Turnover margin: Plus-6.1 (2nd)

Gregg Marshall

Wichita State

(30-8, 12-6), WEST REGION CHAMPS

KEY TO FINAL FOUR RUN

Strong starts. The Shockers have held a double-digit lead at some point in the first half of their past three games. Defense has been the key. Opponents have averaged 24.0 points in the first half vs. Wichita State, and the Shockers have averaged a 9.8-point lead at the break.

WEAKNESS

Lack of a star. Cleanthony Early is the Shockers' leading scorer, averaging 13.7 points a game, but he had only two points in the Shockers' loss in the Missouri Valley title game. Malcolm Armistead has stepped up as Wichita State's top scoring option in the tournament, but he's shooting 35.6 percent from the field.

PATH TO THE FINAL FOUR

2nd round: No. 8 Pittsburgh, 73-55
3rd round: No. 1 Gonzaga, 76-70
Sweet 16: No. 13 La Salle, 72-58
Elite Eight: No. 2 Ohio St., 70-66

Strong Showing ... So Far

The four teams left in the NCAA tournament didn't exactly have flawless

seasons. Louisville, Syracuse and Wichita State each went through three-game losing skids, and Michigan lost three of four at one point during the season. But each team is playing its best basketball at the most opportune time. Is the Final Four when the weaknesses show up again? JEFFREY TOMIK (EXPRESS)

Jim Boehm

Syracuse

(30-9, 11-7), EAST REGION CHAMPS

KEY TO FINAL FOUR RUN

The 2-3 zone. In their four tournament games, the Orange have given up only 183 points (45.75 per game), the fewest through Elite Eight games since the tournament expanded in 1985. Opponents have shot just 28.9 percent from the floor and 15.2 percent from 3-point range against the vaunted 2-3 zone.

WEAKNESS

Inconsistent shooting. Syracuse can go through some long scoring droughts. In their third-round game vs. California, the Orange escaped with a win despite a 12-minute span without a field goal. Syracuse has shot 33.7 percent from 3-point range this season, ranking 184th in the country.

PATH TO THE FINAL FOUR

2nd round: No. 13 Montana, 81-34

Turnover margin: Plus-3.2 (20th)

John Beilein

Michigan

(30-7, 12-6), SOUTH REGION CHAMPS

KEY TO FINAL FOUR RUN

Mitch McGary's play. The freshman forward scored in double digits six times in 31 regular-season games. But since the start of the Big Ten tournament, McGary has scored 10 or more points five times. In four NCAA tournament games, he's averaging 17.5 points and 11.5 rebounds a game.

WEAKNESS

Lack of a shot-blocker. Michigan is an average defensive team, allowing opponents to shoot 42.3 percent from the field (148th in the country). The biggest problem is a lack of an imposing interior defender. The Wolverines finished last in the Big Ten in blocks, at just 2.8 per game.

PATH TO THE FINAL FOUR

2nd round: No. 13 S. Dakota St., 71-56
3rd round: No. 5 VCU, 78-53
Sweet 16: No. 1 Kansas, 87-85 (OT)
Elite Eight: No. 3 Florida, 79-59

NATIONAL RANK

Points per game: 75.5 (23rd)
Points allowed per game: 62.9 (77th)

Big East Bash in Big Easy

Louisville, Notre Dame and UConn all make it to women's Final Four

Women's Tournament

Three of the women's Final Four teams — Connecticut, Louisville and Notre Dame — hail from a league that has long thrived in both women's and men's college basketball, a league which is breaking apart after this season.

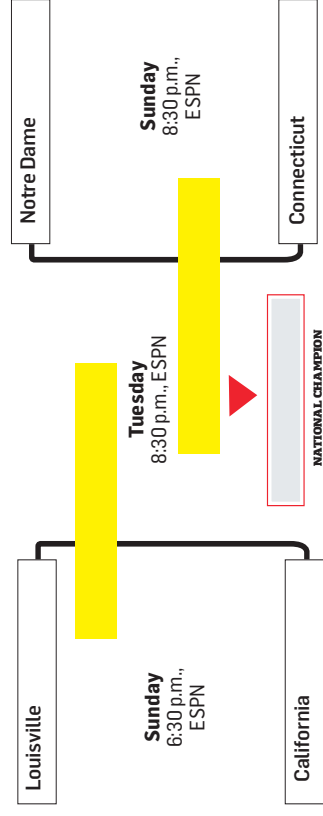

"I guess the shout-out should go to all [the university] presidents for having the foresight to tear apart the greatest basketball conference that ever existed," UConn coach Geno Auriemma said,

Connecticut coach Geno Auriemma has led the Huskies to their sixth-straight Final Four.

NEW ORLEANS SUNDAY & TUESDAY

castically said during a women's Final Four coaches conference call Wednesday, noting that two teams in the men's

Final Four (Louisville and Syracuse) also are from the Big East. "But I guess it's a great swan song."

At this point, only California of the Pac-12 could spoil the party for those who want to see the current Big East take home one last women's national title, which would be its ninth.

Connecticut is the only one of the three current Big East teams in the women's Final Four that is currently committed to remaining in the conference, which is adding a handful of new schools, losing others (including Notre Dame this summer and Louisville in 2014) and changing names — it will be the American Athletic Conference.

Still, Notre Dame coach Muffet McGraw said her team takes pride in being part of a league that has three teams left standing, and which will have at least one team in the final after Notre Dame and UConn meet in a third-straight national semifinal on Sunday night. BRETT MARTEL (AP)

High-Rises Rise Along 14th Street

The trendy Northwest strip will soon be home to a bevy of new rentals

Neighborhoods

The number of hard-hatted construction workers operating Bobcats and slinging cement along the 14th Street corridor these days rivals the number of pedestrians. It's a reflection of a neighborhood that's rapidly morphing into an upscale residential district with a bevy of nightlife and dining options.

A significant portion of the new developments are luxury apartment buildings. In fact, in between Rhode Island Avenue and Euclid Street, it's hard to walk more than a block on 14th Street Northwest without stumbling across one that just opened or promises to be available within the next year.

By the time the cranes are gone, the number of class A apartments (those with lots of amenities and built after 1990) will have more than doubled in the area, from 1,534 units today to 3,379,

JASON HORRICK PHOTOS FOR EXPRESS

"Above and beyond all of the other neighborhoods in D.C., this is most interesting," says Ariel Freeman Sanett, at right, of the growing 14th Street corridor.

according to Greg Leisch, CEO of Delta Associates, a commercial real estate and research firm.

No extravagances have been spared in the design of these new top-of-the-line rentals.

Capitol View on 14th (2420 14th St. NW; 877-275-5357; Capitolviewon14th.com), situated between Belmont and Chapin streets, boasts something called a "Zen water garden" in addition to a rooftop pool. Just two blocks south is 14W (1315 W St. NW; 14wdc.com, 866-671-6117), which is scheduled to open in May and features a club room with a chef kitchen.

A stone's throw from there, Louis at 14th and U (1920 14th St. NW; Louisat14.com), a 268-apartment property, is under construction.

We tried to "maximize natural light in to the units," said Kai Reynolds, a partner at JBG, the real-estate company behind the development. In addition to sun-drenched living rooms, future residents of Louis will have an outdoor rooftop movie theater.

If you want to live in one of these flashy new pads, be prepared to open up your wallet.

The price of entry for the most modest units currently available at Capitol View on 14th is $2,071 per month, and that's for a studio that's a little more than 500 square feet. The two-bedrooms range from about $3,700 to $5,800.

Down the street at 14W, the prices are similar, ranging from $2,000 to $4,700, said Robbie Brooks, vice president of development at Jefferson Apartment Group, one of the firms behind the property.

But Brooks says you get a lot for that price. Homes at 14W have

"I've lived in a lot of cities all over the world, and I have never witnessed such evolution and gentrification."

— ARIEL FREEMAN SANETT, A RESIDENT OF THE 14TH STREET CORRIDOR

"European-inspired designs, open floor plans and quiet city living on W street, a residential street with less traffic and noise than 14th and U Street," Brooks says.

Locals also say it's worth the price tag.

"Above and beyond all of the other neighborhoods in D.C., this is most interesting," says Ariel Freeman Sanett, a 30-year-old hotel industry executive who lives at View 14 with her husband, Paul. "I've lived in a lot of cities all over the world, and I have never witnessed such evolution and gentrification."

Along with the influx of residential properties, the number of new restaurants and shops is about to double, with many of the new apartment buildings housing this new commerce.

New eateries and stores scheduled to open include the supermarket Trader Joe's; Ted's Bulletin, an American diner; two new restaurants by Mike Isabella of "Top Chef" fame; Le Diplomate, a new French restaurant; and Bar di Bari, a European-style cafe.

"It's become an amazing destination," says Reynolds of JBG, the company responsible for approximately 1,200 new rental units within a mile of the area.

It's not just restaurants that are banning smoking. Many apartment buildings are, too. Find out why in next week's issue of Ready to Rent.

To the casual observer, it may seem like the pace of construction recently hit fever pitch. But for those involved, this overhaul has been in the works for some time.

"Typically it takes four to six years to acquire a site and build it," Reynolds says.

While the arrival of chic new abodes and sophisticated retail to match has generated a lot of buzz, it's one of the old establishments that Sanett points to as a highlight of living in the area.

Spending time at Judy's, a no-frills Salvadorian restaurant and bar located at 14th and Florida, is a favorite pastime for Sanett.

What goes on there late at night on the weekends is a completely different scene from what's happening at the trendier bars, such as Policy or Masa 14, a few blocks away, Sanett says.

"It has local neighborhood character," and "everyone is welcoming."

ELIZA KRIGMAN (FOR EXPRESS)

A Neighborhood's Transformation

Many Washingtonians now consider the 14th Street corridor a hot strip of real estate and the hippest spot to party and dine out, but it wasn't always this way. "When we came here, this was the sin capital of Washington ... there were prostitutes roaming the streets," says David Treadwell, executive director of Central Union Mission, a homeless shelter at 14th and R streets. "We believe we helped clean all of that up."

Treadwell and others say the transformation of the neighborhood began in earnest when Whole Foods moved onto P Street, between 13th and 14th streets, in December 2000.

The neighborhood's seedy past made it an affordable place for real estate firms to rebuild.

"Developers didn't have to pay as much for land in the year 2000 in this sub market," says Greg Leisch, CEO of Delta Associates, a commercial real estate and research company.

But perhaps more important than that, Leisch argues, is the convenience

Construction of the P Street Whole Foods, shown in progress in 2000, kick-started 14th Street's transformation.

that 14th Street NW offers.

"It's location, location, location," Leisch says, noting that it's close to public transportation and downtown.

Ultimately, it's a reflection of a city that has become increasingly attractive for 20-somethings and 30-somethings. And that cohort doesn't want to live in "Greenbelt, Md., or upper Northwest, they want to live where the hip action is," Leisch says.

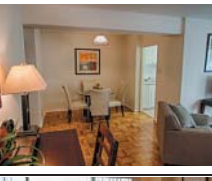

With all the new developments, some of the old fixtures, including the Mission, will be moving out.

The Mission sold its building for $7 million and will be moving downtown to 65 Massachusetts Ave. NW. Coupled with another $7 million in private funds, it is renovating its new home.

Rising real-estate value "offered us an opportunity to get a new and better revised space," Treadwell says. E.K.

2013 ncaa tournament

Strong Showing ... So Far

The four teams left in the NCAA tournament didn't exactly have flawless

seasons. Louisville, Syracuse and Wichita State each went through three-game losing skids, and Michigan lost three of four at one point during the season. But each team is playing its best basketball at the most opportune time. Is the Final Four when the weaknesses

show up again? JEFFREY TOMIK (EXPRESS)

Rick Pitino

Louisville

(33-5, 14-4), MIDWEST REGION CHAMPS

KEY TO FINAL FOUR RUN

Forcing turnovers. Louisville was second in the country in steals and turnover margin during the regular season and its pressure defense has fueled the Cardinals' run. They have a plus-22 turnover margin and 48 steals in four tournament games. Russ Smith has also helped; the guard has averaged 26.0 points a game.

WEAKNESS

3-point shooting. Smith has been hot all tournament, but his shot selection can be problematic at times. In Louisville's five losses this season, Smith was just 3-for-23 from 3-point range (13.0 percent). As a team, Louisville shot 32.8 from behind the arc, ranking 217th in the country.

PATH TO THE FINAL FOUR

2nd round: No. 13 Montana, 81-34
3rd round: No. 12 California, 66-60
Sweet 16: No. 1 Indiana, 61-50
Elite Eight: No. 3 Marquette, 55-39

NATIONAL RANK

Points per game: 74.3 (31st)
Points allowed per game: 58.1 (16th)
Rebounding margin: Plus-3.7 (64th)
Assists per game: 14.6 (52nd)
Field goal percentage: 45.6 (62nd)
Turnover margin: Plus-6.1 (2nd)

Gregg Marshall

Wichita State

(30-8, 12-6), WEST REGION CHAMPS

KEY TO FINAL FOUR RUN

Strong starts. The Shockers have held a double-digit lead at some point in the first half of their past three games. Defense has been the key. Opponents have averaged 24.0 points in the first half vs. Wichita State, and the Shockers have averaged a 9.8-point lead at the break.

WEAKNESS

Lack of a star. Cleanthony Early is the Shockers' leading scorer, averaging 13.7 points a game, but he had only two points in the Shockers' loss in the Missouri Valley title game. Malcolm Armstead has stepped up as Wichita State's top scoring option in the tournament, but he's shooting 35.6 percent from the field.

PATH TO THE FINAL FOUR

2nd round: No. 8 Pittsburgh, 73-55
3rd round: No. 1 Gonzaga, 76-70
Sweet 16: No. 13 La Salle, 72-58
Elite Eight: No. 2 Ohio St., 70-66

NATIONAL RANK

Points per game: 69.8 (111th)
Points allowed per game: 60.9 (42nd)
Rebounding margin: Plus-8.0 (7th)
Assists per game: 13.6 (115th)
Field goal percentage: 44.1 (122nd)
Turnover margin: Plus-0.4 (153rd)

John Beilein

Michigan

(30-7, 12-6), SOUTH REGION CHAMPS

KEY TO FINAL FOUR RUN

Mitch McGary's play. The freshman forward scored in double digits six times in 31 regular-season games. But since the start of the Big Ten tournament, McGary has scored 10 or more points five times. In four NCAA tournament games, he's averaging 17.5 points and 11.5 rebounds a game.

WEAKNESS

Lack of a shot-blocker. Michigan is an average defensive team, allowing opponents to shoot 42.3 percent from the field (148th in the country). The biggest problem is a lack of an imposing interior defender. The Wolverines finished last in the Big Ten in blocks, at just 2.8 per game.

PATH TO THE FINAL FOUR

2nd round: No. 13 S. Dakota St., 71-56
3rd round: No. 5 VCU, 78-53
Sweet 16: No. 1 Kansas, 87-85 (OT)
Elite Eight: No. 3 Florida, 79-59

NATIONAL RANK

Points per game: 75.5 (23rd)
Points allowed per game: 62.9 (77th)
Rebounding margin: Plus-3.1 (83rd)
Assists per game: 14.5 (62nd)
Field goal percentage: 48.5 (6th)
Turnover margin: Plus-2.8 (29th)

Jim Boeheim

Syracuse

(30-9, 11-7), EAST REGION CHAMPS

KEY TO FINAL FOUR RUN

The 2-3 zone. In their four tournament games, the Orange have given up only 183 points (45.75 per game), the fewest through Elite Eight games since the tournament expanded in 1985. Opponents have shot just 28.9 percent from the floor and 15.2 percent from 3-point range against the vaunted 2-3 zone.

WEAKNESS

Inconsistent shooting. Syracuse can go through some long scoring droughts. In their third-round game vs. California, the Orange escaped with a win despite a 12-minute span without a field goal. Syracuse has shot 33.7 percent from 3-point range this season, ranking 184th in the country.

PATH TO THE FINAL FOUR

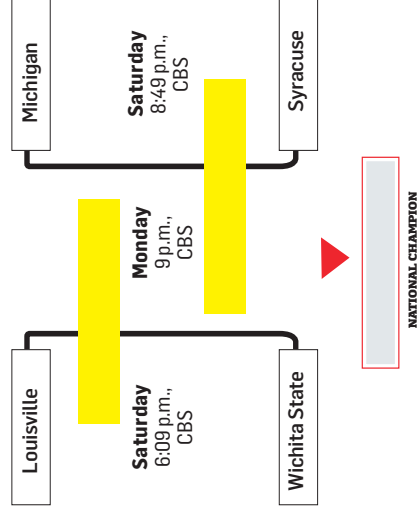

2nd round: No. 13 Montana, 81-34
3rd round: No. 12 California, 66-60
Sweet 16: No. 1 Indiana, 61-50
Elite Eight: No. 3 Marquette, 55-39

NATIONAL RANK

Points per game: 70.8 (89th)
Points allowed per game: 58.6 (21st)
Rebounding margin: Plus-3.7 (65th)
Assists per game: 14.1 (85th)
Field goal percentage: 43.9 (131st)
Turnover margin: Plus-3.2 (20th)

ATLANTA SATURDAY & MONDAY

lookout

Read up on Washington's growing magazine and zine scenes 23
Legacy defines the characters in 'The Place Beyond the Pines' 20

Megan (Jessica Pare) and Don (Jon Hamm) have something to celebrate in the premiere of "Mad Men's" sixth season.

Anxiety Awaits

In the first episode of the first season of "Mad Men," Don Draper's next-in-line affair, Rachel Menken, hears his brutal philosophy: Love is nothing more than an ad man's myth, and everyone is born alone and dies alone. Stack up five years of equivalent cynicism and unfulfilled dreams and the result is a drama with a core of shattered glass, dazzling but menacing.

As the series returns for what creator Matthew Weiner says is the penultimate season, he's asking viewers to embrace other, more comfortable concepts: belief and trust.

They must believe that he knows what they will find satisfying for Don, Peggy, Pete and the other souls of "Mad Men," and trust in his vision as the AMC drama returns Sunday at 9 p.m. with a two-hour episode.

That he's putting his characters on the knife's edge of dread may not make that trust any easier — especially since Weiner believes we are living uneasily with a 21st-century version of their 1960s mindset.

"This season is very much capturing what's going on right now, in a strange way," Weiner says. "I think we have been thrown into a state of individual anxiety, based on being disconnected from events outside our control."

The writer-director paraphrases a line from Sunday's episode that he deems key to the sixth season: People will do anything to alleviate anxiety.

If that's intriguing but maddeningly cryptic, that's how Weiner wants "Mad Men" to be approached pre-debut. No spoilers, not a hint of what happens, when it happens or whether Don is finally taking the institution of marriage to heart.

Jon Hamm, the center-ring attraction as Don, the sharp-dressed ad man with the tortured psyche, credits Weiner's probing, self-analytic nature with producing the richly complex world of "Mad Men" and its parade of human and cultural foibles.

"Matt is a wickedly smart, very curious and deeply flawed person, and he likes exploring those flaws and pulling them apart and examining them," Hamm says.

With the journey nearing conclusion for Draper and his fellow travelers, Weiner is faced with the task of wrapping up the ambitious drama next year.

"I have an idea for what it feels like for the show to end, and I think I know how it ends, and I've known for a couple of years," Weiner says.

Could Don, at last, find happiness?

Backstory

"Mad Men" creator Matt Weiner won't talk about what's in season 6, but he will say what it's not. "It's not about Lane's suicide. There is no eulogy for Lane. It's not all about Joan and the Jaguar guy," he says, referencing two of last season's more startling twists. There are other stories to be told, Weiner says, even if viewers tend to cling to the past. "They have to trust me," he says. (AP)

Admission

(PG-13, 110 MINUTES) "Admission" is a cinematic underachiever: a movie with a good head on its shoulders but with an inconsistent report card. There's a high school senior with the same problem at the center of this off-kilter charmer — Jeremiah Balakian (Nat Wolff). Paul Rudd plays Jeremiah's principal, John Pressman, an earnest free spirit who's so determined to get his misfit star pupil into a good school that he calls up his old college classmate Portia Nathan (Tina Fey), a Princeton admissions officer he believes might be Jeremiah's mother. "Admission" is a serious film about life, relationships and growing up, with a gloss of humor. M.O.

The Croods

(PG, 92 MINUTES) Think of this as the story of "The Flintstones," before that modern Stone Age family got, well, modern. Hunter-gatherers Grug Crood and his wife, Ugga, don't live in an amenity-filled house but in a dark, depressing cave. Driving the story forward is Eep, a restless teen. Sneaking out of the cave one night, Eep encounters Guy, a more advanced, Homo-sapiens-like adolescent who has discovered that the world as Eep knows it is coming to an end, thanks to shifting continental land masses. "The Croods" is light fare, but it explores a serious theme: the importance of cooperation in the formation of human society. M.O.

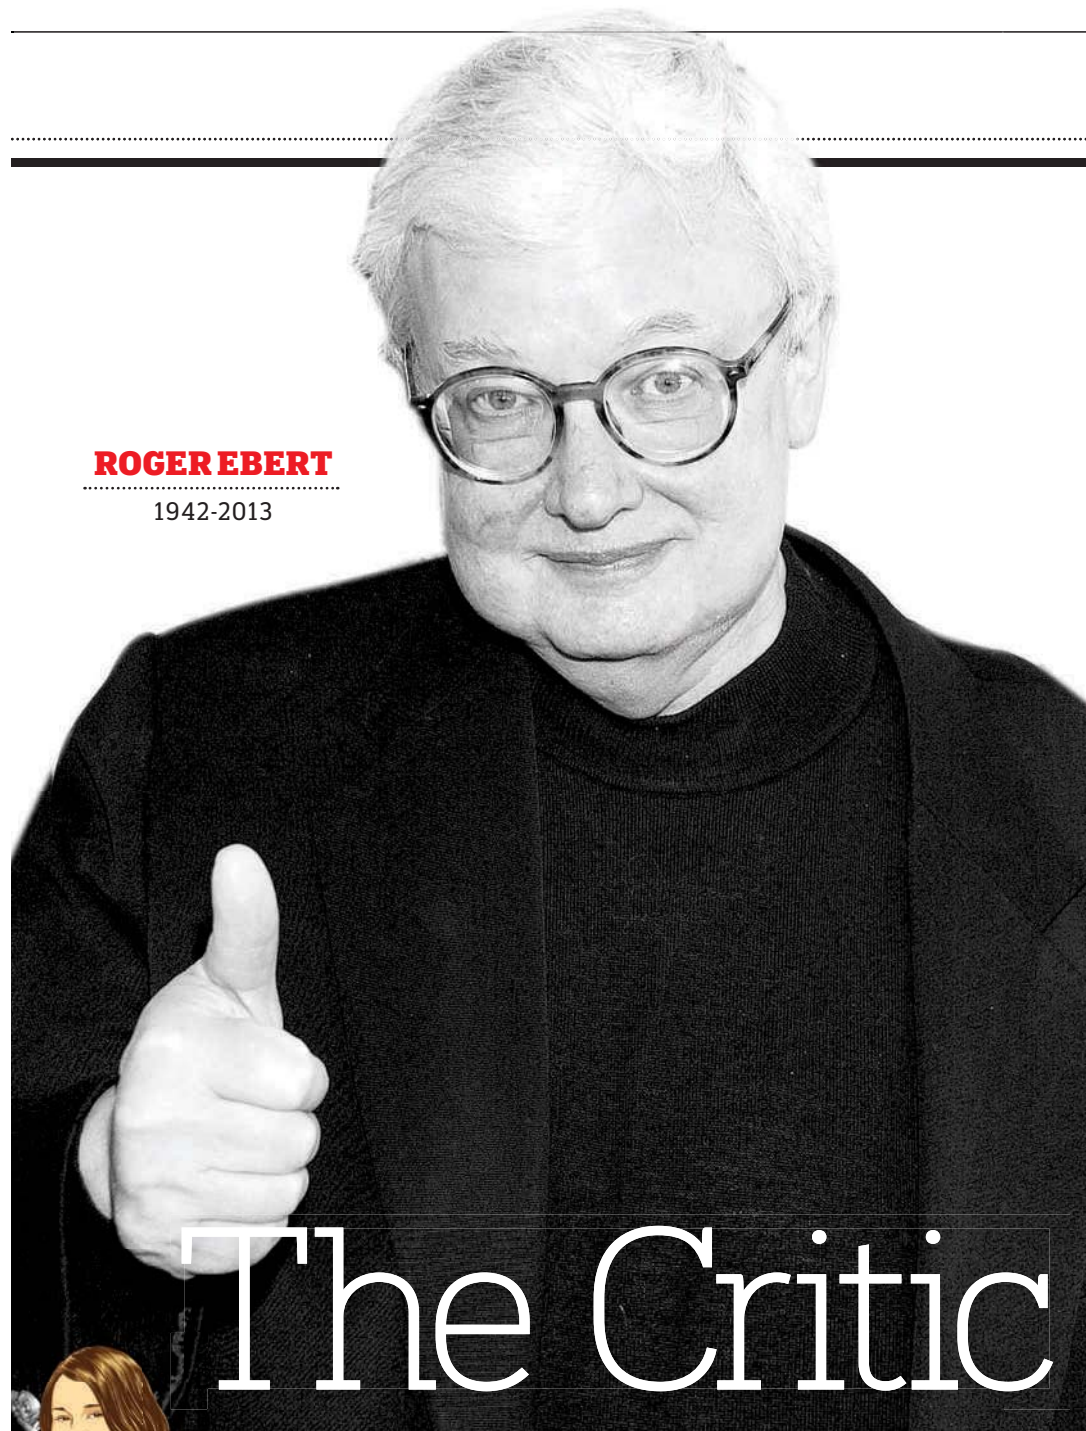

G.I. Joe: Retaliation

(PG-13, 115 MINUTES) 2009's "G.I. Joe: The Rise of Cobra," which transformed toy soldiers into Channing Tatum and Dennis Quaid, was annihilated by critics but performed well at the box office, which means "G.I. Joe: Retaliation" is being billed as a reboot. Except it's not. Rather than wiping the slate clean, the filmmakers integrate, seemingly at random, elements from the last film. For all its absurdity, the movie takes itself awfully seriously. And while "G.I. Joe" is merely a movie based on Hasbro toys, the action feels just as lifeless. STEPHANIE MERRY

ROGER EBERT

1942-2013

The Critic

THE REELIST KRISTEN PAGE-KIRBY

Roger Ebert and Gene Siskel were the first people I ever heard discuss movies with deep, intelligent passion. I always liked Ebert better, and I really don't think I'd be doing what I do without him.

I just didn't want to do this. I was on my way home Thursday when I got an email with "Do you want to write a quick column about Roger Ebert dying?" as the subject. No. No, I did not.

I saw Ebert in person once. Back when I was in graduate school in Chicago, I was writing the occasional movie review for the student newspaper and once got to go to a critics-only screening. It was Kevin Smith's "Dogma," so a lot of the college papers sent reviewers; most of us had never been to a screening like this. As the appointed time came and went, someone asked when the film would start. "When Roger gets here," was the answer. Sure enough, when Ebert walked in (only five minutes late), the lights dimmed. He was a Big Deal, but in his writing, he never seemed to think so.

How to Remember Ebert

Read his 2007 book, "Your Movie Sucks." And maybe go see a movie this weekend.

He thought of himself, always, still, as a "newspaperman," a charmingly archaic term he used even after he became so much more than that, when he had developed into a TV host, a prolific blogger and a master

A Life At the Movies

Obituary

Roger Ebert had the most-watched thumb in Hollywood.

With a mere twist of his wrist, the Pulitzer Prize-winning critic influenced a nation of moviegoers.

Ebert, film critic for the Chicago Sun-Times since 1967, died

"I know it is coming, and I do not fear it, because I believe there is nothing on the other side of death to fear."

— ROGER EBERT, IN AN EXCERPT FROM HIS 2011 MEMOIR "LIFE ITSELF"

Thursday at the Rehabilitation Institute of Chicago, two days after announcing that he was undergoing radiation treatment for a recurrence of cancer. He was 70.

In what would be his final blog post, Ebert wrote: "So on this day of reflection I say again, thank you for going on this journey with me. I'll see you at the movies."

The writer in the horn-rimmed glasses teamed up on TV with Gene Siskel to create a format for criticism that proved enormously appealing: simple reviews that were both intelligent and accessible.

In his 2011 memoir, "Life Itself," Ebert wrote: "I have seen untold numbers of movies and forgotten most of them, I hope, but I remember those worth remembering, and they are all on the same shelf in my mind."

CARYN ROUSSEAU (AP)

EBERT ON FILM

"Every great film should seem new every time you see it."

THE GOOD

ON 'E.T. - THE EXTRA-TERRESTRIAL' (1982):

"This movie made my heart glad. It is filled with innocence, hope, and good cheer. It is also wickedly funny and exciting as hell."

ON 'STAR WARS' (1977):

"Every once in a while I have what I think of as an out-of-the-body experience at a movie. ... Here, all mixed together, were whimsy and fantasy, simple wonderment and quietly sophisticated storytelling."

THE BAD

ON 'THE BROWN BUNNY' (2003):

"I had a colonoscopy once, and they let me watch it on TV. It was more entertaining than 'The Brown Bunny.'"

ON 'GOOD LUCK CHUCK' (2007):

"There is a word for this movie, and that word is: Ick."

of Twitter. ("My newspaper job," he said in 2005, "is my identity.")

I am related to a good many newspeople; the business is so in my blood that one of the first things I thought was that it was quite gracious of Ebert to die in time for East Coast print deadlines. Which is why I changed my no to a yes and started typing this. I may never have met Ebert, but I know one thing: Newspapermen make deadlines.

So this is what I want to write: Roger Ebert was one of the funniest, most beautiful writers in American journalism. And, for me, he was the best teacher I never got to meet.

In 'The Place Beyond the Pines,' sons pay for the sins of fathers

Film

Welcome to Schenectady, N.Y., first settled in 1661, a city where Thomas Edison lived and worked, where the rotary engine and air brakes were born, where the police badge portrays Native Americans chasing Dutch settlers out of a burning building.

Schenectady is also the reason "The Place Beyond the Pines" — director Derek Cianfrance's follow-up to "Blue Valentine" — exists.

"You can't shake the history," says Cianfrance, whose wife is from the area. "When I go up to Schenectady, I feel that. It's all there. Things actually don't go away — there's reverberation for entire lifetimes."

The film, opening Friday, mirrors that as it follows Luke (Ryan Gosling), a motorcycle stuntman-turned-bank robber, and Avery (Bradley Cooper), a cop who's after him. The story jumps ahead about 16 years, to when Luke's son (Dane

Director Derek Cianfrance, left, chats on the set of "The Place Beyond the Pines" with actors Ryan Gosling and Bradley Cooper.

DeHaan) meets Avery's son (Emory Cohen) and the two struggle not only with their own choices, but with those made by their fathers.

"This movie is all about legacy and, for me, it was about personal legacy," he says. "It was about all of my feelings about becoming a father again, thinking about this child that was going to come into this world, and I just wanted him to be born without any of my past wrongdoings or sins or anything — just let him be himself."

In the film, Avery and Luke try hard to prove they're not the men their fathers are. Both ultimately fail. Avery, the son of a highly respected, wealthy judge, "is never meant to be a cop," Cianfrance says. "He's meant to be his father's son." As for Luke, "he grew up without

The choices Avery and Luke make trickle down to their sons — Avery Jr. and Jason — who themselves are trying to break the cycle.

"They end up crashing into [history], colliding into it, and that's what I tried to build the whole film about," Cianfrance says. "It's trying to escape your past, trying to escape your destiny, trying to escape your legacy, but being unable to do it."

A Fear Fest With Little Fun

An 'Evil Dead' reboot lacks the humor that made the originals cult horror favorites

Film Review

Fans of 1981's "The Evil Dead" and its campy sequels can relax. The reboot of the beloved, low-budget, cult horror film about five young friends terrorized by a demonic spirit does exactly what it's supposed to do: scare you to the chiropractor.

The new version, by Uruguayan director Fede Alvarez, making his feature debut, is more stomach-churning than soul-chilling. The list of on-screen atrocities includes attacks by nail gun, electric carving knife, chain saw, shotgun, crowbar and chunk of ceramic from a broken toilet tank, used as a crude bludgeon.

As in the original film, the action

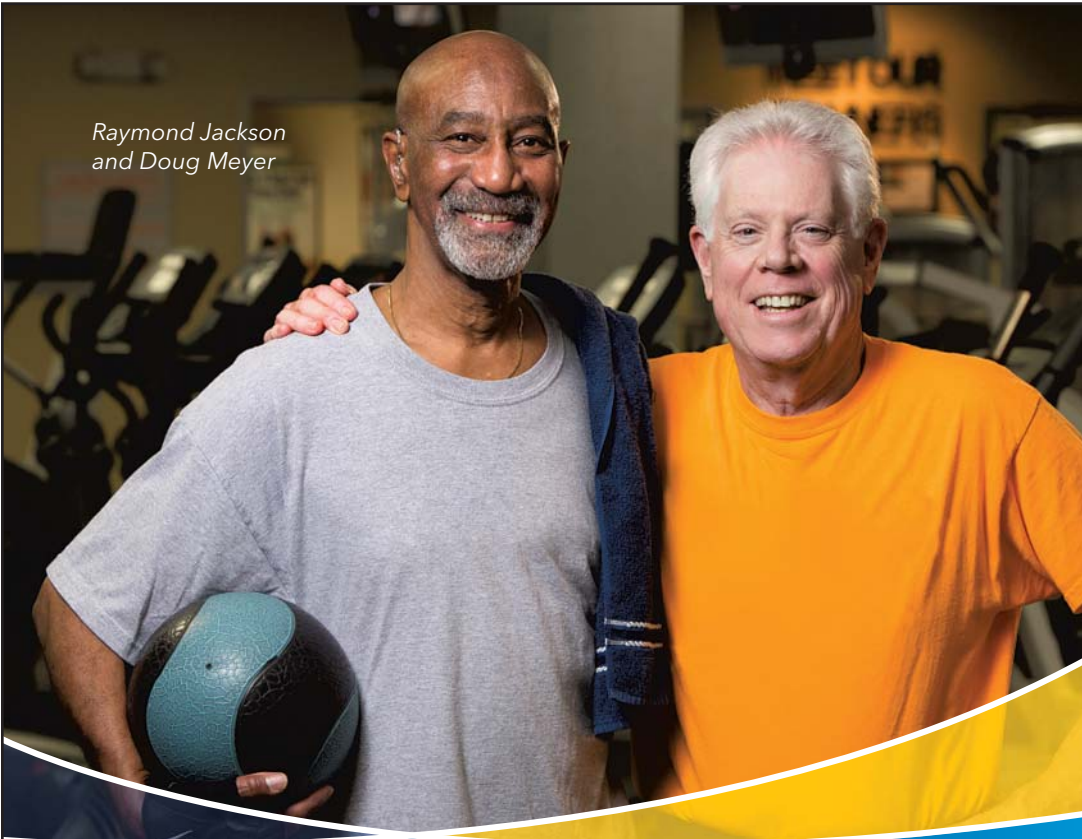

Mia (Jane Levy) picked the wrong week to be going through drug withdrawal.

revolves around a derelict cabin in the woods. This time, it's the site of a drug intervention. One of the friends, Mia (Jane Levy), is a junkie, and her brother, David (Shiloh Fernandez), his girlfriend, Natalie (Elizabeth Blackmore), and Mia's two best friends, Eric and Olivia (Lou Taylor Pucci and Jessica Lucas), have decided that the best place for Mia to experience the seizures, hallucinations and psychosis of withdrawal is in a place with a taxidermy shop's worth of rotting cat carcasses hanging from the basement ceiling.

What follows is a rapid descent into madness, homicide and self-mutilation, first by one, then another of the cohorts, until it is literally raining blood. MICHAEL O'SULLIVAN (THE WASHINGTON POST)

Raymond Jackson and Doug Meyer

Two best friends with prostate cancer.
Five quick CyberKnife® treatments saved them both.

When Doug learned he had prostate cancer, he wanted a treatment to minimize his downtime. His research led him to MedStar Georgetown University Hospital and the painless, nonsurgical CyberKnife. So when his friend Raymond was also diagnosed with prostate cancer, Doug immediately recommended the experienced CyberKnife team at MedStar Georgetown that saved his life.

CyberKnife destroys tumors using radiation, with minimal harm to the healthy surrounding tissue. And, there is no overnight stay and the risk of major side effects is low. Unlike traditional radiation treatment, which requires as many as 40 treatments, CyberKnife can be done in just five treatments. So patients like Doug and Raymond are back enjoying their lives in no time.

The Host

(PG-13, 121 MINUTES) Like the "Twilight" saga and its Edward-Bella-Jacob triangle,

"The Host" centers on a teenage girl (Saoirse Ronan) who's torn between two lovers. Like Bella, she's of two minds. One of them is called Melanie. Melanie loves Jared (Max Irons). But Melanie's body has been taken over by a parasitic alien that has its own personality and name: Wanda. Wanda loves Ian (Jake Abel). Wanda and Melanie spend most of the movie bickering with each other over boys, which makes Ronan look like a crazy person. This might have made for a slightly creepy nightmare of possession; instead, it makes for a somewhat dull action flick. M.O.

Olympus Has Fallen

(R, 118 MINUTES) In "Olympus Has Fallen," Gerard Butler plays Mike Banning, a Secret Service agent whose close relationship with President Benjamin Asher and his son, Connor, is destroyed after a rescue mission goes awry. A visit from the South Korean prime minister ends with Asher, the vice president and the secretary of defense being abducted and held hostage in the White House bunker. Director Antoine Fuqua stages the takeover of 1600 Pennsylvania Ave. and its environs with unsettling, visceral mayhem. Spring is barely here, and America already has its first summer blockbuster. A.H.

Oz the Great and Powerful

(PG, 130 MINUTES) Oscar Diggs (James Franco) is a sideshow conjurer with a traveling circus in 1905 Kansas. He's forced to make a quick escape from the midway via hot-air balloon, at which point he's caught in a cyclone that plops him down in a brightly colored, wide-screen world. If that all sounds familiar, it's meant to: "Oz the Great and Powerful" hews faithfully to Victor Fleming's "The Wizard of Oz." Plopping a Gen-X California boy into a role that calls for swift instincts and shrewd alertness is an error from which "Oz" never recovers. A.H.

Spring Breakers

(R, 92 MINUTES) What little fascination there is in "Spring Breakers," Harmony Korine's tedious exercise in crime drama, comes courtesy of James Franco, who plays a cornrowed, dental-grill-wearing drug dealer named Alien. It's a 15-minute script padded out to 92 minutes with scenes of degrading "Girls Gone Wild"-style toplessness, underage drinking and drug use, and culminating in an absurd, slow-motion shootout featuring bikini-clad gunmen in pink ski masks. How on earth is it possible for one film to be so tiresome? M.O.

The Sapphires

(PG-13, 99 MINUTES) This portrait of a Supremes-esque girl group from Down Under is so unabashedly earnest and well-intentioned that one is almost tempted to overlook the little indie's shortcomings. But "The Sapphires" is a pedestrian and derivative effort whose ambitions exceed its plucky, determined grasp. That's a shame, because when the members of the film's female quartet croon tunes from a genre best described as Aboriginal Australian Motown, the movie bubbles over with joy. JEN CHANEY

Tyler Perry's Temptation

(PG-13, 111 MINUTES) Here, we meet Judith and Brice, childhood sweethearts who grew up in the South, married young and moved to Washington. But there's an ultra-smooth social media mogul named Harley who's working on a business-related project with Judith and blatantly attempting to seduce her. We know what's going to happen—yet we still have to sit through more than an hour of flirty glances until anything vaguely adulterous occurs. J.C.

Looking Good, on Paper

Call us biased, but we believe print is not dead. Judging by D.C.'s healthy magazine and zine scene — from cult favorite The Runcible Spoon to the just-launched The Intentional — we're in good company. Dirk Keaton, an organizer of DC Zine Fest, corroborates that printed materials “have a real emotional and cultural relevance. It's the same reason people collect vinyl records even though they have iPods.” These notable publications make their homes in the District. HOLLEY SIMMONS AND FIONA ZUBLIN (EXPRESS)

BITTERSWEET

WHO IT'S FOR:

Do-gooders with an eye for design

WHAT IT COSTS:

$3 per issue; $20 yearly

WHAT TO EXPECT:

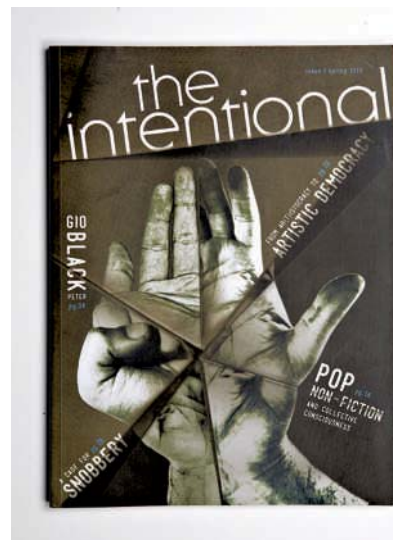

This good-looking, conscience-soothing quarterly, founded in 2010, illuminates social issues on both a national and local scale. Boost the local economy by patronizing Bittersweet's list of noteworthy H Street businesses (Winter 2013), and learn how you can help fight child-sex-trafficking in “Defending Human Rights (Fall 2012).

WHAT'S IN A NAME:

“The word ‘bittersweet’ describes the type of stories we're telling,” says editor Kate Schmidgall. “Would we love that there was no need to fight homelessness, poverty, abuse? Of course. But that's not the case.”

WHERE TO PURCHASE:

Find stores or subscribe at Bittersweetzine.com

THE INTENTIONAL

WHO IT'S FOR:

Intellectual millennials

WHAT IT COSTS:

$12 per issue; $40 yearly

WHAT TO EXPECT:

The Intentional launches Friday after a successful Kickstarter campaign in August. (Buy tickets for the kick-off party at Theintentionallaunch.eventbrite.com.) The inaugural issue includes drawings from Brooklyn-based performance artist Gio Black Peter and a personal essay about a young woman's selfish struggles after an old friend asks her to be a bridesmaid.

WHAT'S IN A NAME:

“The Intentional is all about being thoughtful in the way you live, in terms of how you act and how you interact with others,” says editor Kate Jenkins. And no word captured the idea of conscious living quite like “intentional.”

WHERE TO PURCHASE:

Online at Theintentional.com

THE RUNCIBLE SPOON

WHO IT'S FOR:

Lovers of wacky food and indie zaniness

WHAT IT COSTS:

Between $3 and $9 per issue

WHAT TO EXPECT:

Founded in 2010 by Malaka Gharib, this quarterly-ish zine publishes recipes for maggot-poop cheese (Fall 2012) and sour-patch hot dogs (Spring 2013). Occasionally, you'll find useful features like a guide to the city's brunch buffets (Summer 2012) and how to make your own bitters (Spring 2012). But mostly, The Runcible Spoon is a platter of stream-of-consciousness essays and illustrations from artsy-types.

WHAT'S IN A NAME:

The 19th-century poet Edward Lear made up “runcible.” Dictionaries define it as a spork-like eating utensil.

WHERE TO PURCHASE:

Washington's Green Grocer, Seasonal Pantry, Meeps and online at Therunciblespoon.info

WORN MAGAZINE

WHO IT'S FOR:

Fashion elite who prefer their photos large and their journalism long-form

WHAT IT COSTS:

$10 per issue

WHAT TO EXPECT:

“The mainstream media in D.C. wasn't covering this artistic, young scene that I was part of,” says Nicole Aguirre, the photographer who founded Worn in 2009. “So I just decided to be the change.” The biannual magazine has a few articles per issue, alongside pictorials of men in natty hats sitting in fields, or women in leather dresses standing next to portable toilets.

WHAT'S IN A NAME:

The title “comes from the idea of having this T-shirt that's your favorite T-shirt that you've worn a thousand times that just feels like you,” Aguirre says. “That's my definition of style.”

lookout food

FACE TIME

Ted and Matt Lee

As Southern food writers/historians, authors (and brothers) Ted and Matt Lee know their grits from their grillades (a Creole meat stew). The sibs also distill the culinary charms of their native South Carolina in magazine articles and via a down-home, gourmet e-boutique, Boiledpeanuts.com. They just published "The Lee Bros. Charleston Kitchen" ($35, Clarkson Potter) devoted to their hometown's eats.

Charleston really seems to be having a moment, food-wise. Why are people just now discovering it?

Matt Lee: Well, Charleston has been a tourist town for centuries, but it's only been a restaurant town for a few decades. I think people are finally recognizing how good the home cooking is there because of all the restaurant excitement.

What does Charleston food mean, in a few words?

Ted Lee: It's an exciting food culture, in that Charleston is perfectly placed for the locavore movement. There are so many fresh, raw materials. You're close to the ocean, which means so much seafood. That all combines with this flourishing tradition of cooking in people's homes.

These recipes focus on Southern ingredients. Aren't they hard to find in other regions?

TL: Well, not necessarily. Muscadine grapes, which were just a Southern grape, are now a national thing. I also think a lot of Southern products are becoming staples everywhere: stone-ground grits, sorghum syrups.

"Make sure guests have drinks in their hands the moment they get in the door. The bar should be visible."

How is party-throwing different in the South?

ML: Well, we're more practiced here! We're pros!

TL: I think the architecture of Charleston even lends itself to parties better, the walled gardens, the compressed houses.

How can I bring that Southern hospitality to my next bash?

TL: Well, you'll need to adopt certain conventions. At a party, make sure guests have drinks in their hands the moment they get in the door. The bar should be visible when you walk into someone's house! And get some fresh flowers, too — just a few can really soften a party.

What about cocktails. Are they a big deal in Charleston?

ML: Well, the cocktail revolution has hit Charleston like a sack of ice. We've got the bearded mixologists and the pixie dust.

TL: Yeah, it used to be that South Carolina was a mini-bottle state, where the servers had to open little airplane bottles of liquor in front of you. But getting rid of that has helped people create new things, like the Loquat Manhattan we have in the book.

When you've been away from Charleston, what do you crave when you get back home?

TL: For me, it's the oysters, like a shuck-your-own situation. They're so salty and delicious.

1 Global Trotters

COYE NOKES used to travel the world as a marketing pro. Maybe that's why her shoe line boasts such jet-setter glam. Think gladiators mixing metallics and brights (shown, $325), snakeskin flats and color-block heels. She and her wares step into Betsy Fisher (1224 Connecticut Ave. NW; 202-785-1975) for a Friday and Saturday trunk show.

4 Warming To Trends

DOES MINT GREEN go with orange? How many rings can I wear on one hand? Get answers to these and other spring fashion questions at a workshop with local personal shopper Cathy Phillips Starnes (an Express contributor) from 7 to 9 p.m. Tuesday at Periwinkle (1557 Potomac Greens Drive, Alexandria; 703-519-5242). Among the amusements: cocktails, snacks and shopping for styles such as bright bracelets by Fornash (shown, $20-$30). Tickets, $79; reserve at StyleSpeakSpringFashion.eventbrite.com.

Grab Bag is gathered and reviewed by Jennifer Barger and Holley Simmons. Find more food, fashion, beauty and home goods at readexpress.com/grabbag.

2 Paper Pushers

THOSE WHO FEEL "Luv U" sent via text message is an appropriate method of expressing feelings, stop reading now. Old-school types who value the power of written correspondence, however, should check out Arlington-based Haute Papier's new subscription service (Hautepapier.com). For $80, you'll receive a hodgepodge of paper products each quarter, including stationery sets, letterpress coasters and thank-you cards. (For $20, you can also schedule a one-time delivery.) The boxed sets encourage you to write more letters; they also make charming gifts. Just be prepared for a lovely thank-you note.

5 Looking Backward

BOOZING AND SMOKING like it's 1960—something could take a toll on a gal's complexion. Estée Lauder's new Mad Men Collection aims to prettily undo any excesses with retro-inspired products including Pinkadelic lipstick ($30), powder-pink nail polish ($24) and a rosy rouge that'd make Joan blush ($50). Groovy packaging mimics designs the company used in the '60s.

3 Covered Girl

PROTECTING YOUR clothes from cooking grease doesn't have to mean choosing between a "Maryland Is for Crabs" apron or a full-on "Top Chef" disguise. Luckily, Dupont Circle's Marcy Butler knows the recipe for sleek-yet-practical cover-ups. Her line of Italian linen women's aprons, including the Tina (shown, $88, Marcybutler.com), go from cucina to dinner table in crisp style. There's also a kid-size version ($55).

DEAR MANOLO

ANSWERS FROM THE SHOE BLOGGER

After yet another disastrously brief, wholly unsatisfying relationship, I'm swearing off men. Can you recommend shoes that will take my mind off of my current romantic problems, something fun, light and seasonal that will make me feel better? —LAUREN

Manolo says, as it says in the famous Biblical verse, "there is the balm in Bergdorf Goodman." To which the Doctor Manolo would advise, "please apply it liberally directly to where it hurts the most."

The Manolo has long talked about the curative power of the shoes and shopping, things which are exactly like the chicken soup, the sort of common sense therapy that generations of wise ladies have known to be the effective restoratives.

Indeed, the hunt for and acquisition of beautiful, well-made shoes that fit properly can be ranked among the greatest of life's simple pleasures, capable of bringing joy and satisfaction beyond the utility of the object acquired. For, as we know, shoes are not just merely coverings for the feets, but mobile works of art through which we can express our personalities, and by which we can bring good cheer to ourselves and to other peoples.

Since it is the spring, the season of renewal, the Manolo knows that the best way to honor the new world aborning is with flowers and sandals, and dare it be said, flowery sandals!

Look! Here is the Pedros from Aerin ($198, Zappos.com), in red, the color of hope!

Ask the Manolo a question at manolo@shoeblogs.com. Visit the Manolo at shoeblogs.com.

1 Breaking With Tradition

If you're a "Fantasia" purist, we have bad news: The Baltimore Symphony Orchestra's live-music performance of "Fantasia" (you'll be watching it in HD while they play) is interwoven with the modern update, "Fantasia 2000." Which has Gershwin's "Rhapsody in Blue," so stop complaining. Meyerhoff Symphony Hall, 1212 Cathedral St., Baltimore; Fri. and Sat., $17.50-$50; Bsomusic.org.

2 Jazz and All That

The Kennedy Center honors jazz great Fats Waller on Friday at a free dance party in the atrium. D.C. musician Meshell Ndegeocello will cover his greatest hits while "Fela!" choreographer Maija Garcia teaches you some Afro-Latin jazz dance moves. Kennedy Center, 2700 F St. NW; Fri., 9:30 p.m., free wristbands required for entry; 202-467-4600, Kennedy-center.org. (Foggy Bottom)

3 Spring Shopping

Spring craft markets are harder to justify than holiday markets — you can't tell yourself you're buying these artisan note cards, flasks, scarves and salsa for anybody else. But why should you? It's spring! Support local craftspeople and get out in the sun at the same time at DC Meet Market, a new monthly craft market that begins this weekend. 15th and P streets NW; Sat., 11 a.m., free; Www.dcmeetmarket.com. Stunted Journalism

'Vice' aims to explain an absurd world but mostly loses its grip

Series Premiere

FRI 11:00 The latest effort to turn journalism and what used to be called "foreign correspondence" into something edgy, sexy and dangerous continues with the new HBO series "Vice."

Hosted by Shane Smith, the owner and co-founder of Vice magazine, "Vice" sets out to explore a changing world that, in the words of Smith, frequently seems increasingly "absurd." In the two "Vice" installments made available for review, we visit the Philippines, where running for office has become a dangerous endeavor.

In the second segment, Smith travels to Afghanistan to look into the increasing use of children as suicide bombers. It's not difficult for terrorists to convince children younger than 8 that they can explode a device with no harm to themselves.

Smith secures an interview with a member of the Taliban, who speaks in cryptic aphorisms, neither confirming nor denying the use of children as delivery devices for explosives. But he assures our correspondent that suicide bombings will continue as long as Afghanistan is occupied by foreign troops. So, did Smith gain insight for his viewers, or offer a murderous terrorist a propaganda platform?

Smith has a knack for getting to inaccessible places. He and "Vice" were at the center of a recent visit to North Korea that featured former Chicago Bulls oddity Dennis Rodman. So it's not entirely clear if "Vice" is out to explain the absurdity of modern life or add another ring to the circus.

It's Not Over Yet

In the first of two "Happy Endings" episodes (Fri., 8 p.m., ABC), Max (Adam Pally, above) goes to Jane and Alex's hairdresser (guest star RuPaul), where he picks up some interesting information. The sitcom's future at ABC is unclear, but Deadline.com reports that the USA Network is considering picking up the series should ABC decide to cancel it, much like TBS did with "Cougar Town" last year. HOROSCOPE

ARIES (March 21-April 19) You may think you want to be left alone today, but the truth is that it will be counter-productive — at least in the long run.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) You'll want to talk closely and openly with a friend about what you are facing; he or she, in turn, will share some honest opinions.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) You and a friend have come a long way since you first encountered an obstacle to open communication. Don't take a step backward!

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Things go in cycles, and today it may seem as if you are starting something all over again — but in fact it is an entirely new phase.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) You don't want to break any of the rules today, but you may not be able to avoid bending them just a little!

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) You can have a little fun doing something that others expect you not to do — but take care you don't get carried away.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) You have one or two surprises up your sleeve, and you're merely waiting for the right time to spring them on the unsuspecting.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) You want very little to do with that which has not been tested by others. You're not into experimentation at this time.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) You may be making promises that you cannot keep — try as you might. It's time to step away from that certain precipice.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) What you need can be gotten for you by someone who knows the ropes a little better than you. Experience counts for much today.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) Later on you can do what you want, but today you may have to do what you are told — and only that. There are limits to your freedom.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) You are feeling vulnerable today, but that isn't necessarily a bad thing — or a weakness. Embrace what you cannot avoid.

Samurai Sudoku

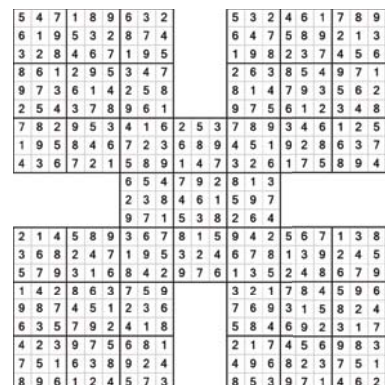

DIFFICULT

Fill in each column, row and 3x3 box with the digits 1 through 9 without repeating any. The twist in Samurai Sudoku is that the digits that appear in the overlapping boxes must work for both puzzles. A piece of advice to get you started: Don't focus on completing one grid at a time. Keep the whole puzzle in mind as you go, because filling in a number in one grid could give you clues to another.
